

THE OPTIMIZATION METHODS IN REGRESSION PROBLEMS

Summary - One of the main tasks in regression problems are suitable selection of input variables set essentially influencing on the explained variable. The data set obtained in bending under tension test was put into analysis. The data set was consisted of technical parameters of the test and responding to them friction coefficient value. Optimization of a number of input variables was carried out using step selection, Hellwig's method and genetic algorithm.